Dear CEO Colleague, Dear Frans,

Thank you for your call to action to commit to doubling circularity within the next 10 years.

TotalEnergies aims to be one of the major players in the energy transition, to get to Net Zero by 2050, together with society. We are engaged in our transformation to build a sustainable multi-energy company, and circularity has definitely an important role to play. The energy transition will require indeed new molecules like sustainable aviation fuels or biogas which will be primarily produced from waste and residues from agriculture and food processing industries, and we are also committed to develop circular polymers either produced by recycling technologies or from biomass. Moreover, we have recently updated our environmental objective on waste and now commit to increase the valorization rate of our operational waste from 50% to 70%.

Therefore, I am glad to state that TotalEnergies is committed to at least doubling circularity within the next 10 years and is willing to join PACE Community.

In order to achieve this objective of doubling circularity, we will follow at least two indicators, the revenues issued from our circular sales in absolute and relative value among our mix of energies and the volume of circular feedstocks used in our production and sales. But we are also keen to learn from companies of the PACE community in order to select the most pertinent indicators to measure our progress to increase circularity year after year.

We understand that the list of companies taking such commitment is intended to be published at the COP27 in November 2022 in Egypt, and we are happy that TotalEnergies might join this group.

My teams will get in touch with the PACE team to start working and move forward.

Sincerely yours,

Patrick Pouyanné
